

Online Board

The primary responsibility of the Online Board is the MJLH online articles, which allows online editors to make contributions and provides readers with the opportunity to remain informed of burgeoning issues at the intersection of health, science and law.

Les étudiants auront l'occasion de s'exprimer sur des sujets d'actualité et d'échanger des idées par rapport à la santé, la science et le droit. De plus, les rédacteurs en ligne effectuent des recherches et analyses de l'actualité juridique et législative en vue de rédiger des commentaires, des résumés de cas et des chroniques publiées sur le site Web.

Recent articles discuss topics such as alternative and complementary medical treatment for children, the legal implications of the neuroscience of disorders of consciousness and the Thompson v Ontario decision pertaining to the Mental Health Act.

In addition, the editors will be responsible for maintaining MJLH's other social media accounts (Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn). The Board will also participate in the annual MJLH Colloquium through "live-tweeting," promotion, etc.

The Online Board seeks candidates who are hard-working and possess strong writing and research abilities.

Solicitations Board

Cognizant of the international reputation of the MJLH, the Strategic Planning and Solicitation (SPAS) Board will have the growth and management of readership and submission as its primary focus. Members of this Board will actively serve as the face of the journal by soliciting authors, scouting peer reviewers from the academic community, and by networking within the law and health community at large.

Over the past year, the Board attended various speaker events hosted by the Faculty of Law and the Institute of Health and Social Policy as official representatives of the MJLH.

Le comité recherche des candidats ayant des compétences fortes en organisation, avec un intérêt marqué pour la stratégie et la communication.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Since its launch in 2007, the MJLH has become a prominent platform in Canada for academic debates on pressing issues related to health, law, policy, and ethics. We receive submissions from scholars based around the world working in a wide range of disciplines. Our readership includes academics, policy makers, judges, and practitioners.

Pourtant, la RDSM est plus qu'une revue imprimée. Elle comprend plusieurs comités, ayant chacun son propre mandat lié à l'objectif commun d'animer des débats importants dans les domaines de recherche relatifs au droit de la santé. Chaque comité offre à ses membres la possibilité de contribuer leurs idées et talents à la mission de la RDSM au moyen de divers projets qui, par ailleurs, leur fournissent l'occasion de développer des compétences importantes.

We invite you to explore the different boards described in this brochure and apply to be part of this exciting student-run endeavour.

Editorial Board

Members of the Editorial Board work directly with the academic articles submitted to the Journal. They review submissions and provide recommendations as to whether an article would be suitable for publication. Editors on this Board also have the opportunity to hone their research and editing skills by verifying sources, checking footnotes, and revising texts.

Les membres du comité de rédaction participent à l'évaluation et la révision d'articles portant sur divers sujets, incluant les questions éthiques entourant les soins en fin de vie, la réglementation de l'édition génétique, et bien d'autres encore. L'année dernière, le comité de rédaction a révisé des manuscrits rédigés par des spécialistes réputés, tels Trudo Lemmens et Jocelyn Downie, sur des thèmes d'actualités et controversés comme la constitutionnalité de la nouvelle loi fédérale permettant l'aide médicale à mourir et les refus contentieux d'approvisionnement de soins de santé.

The Editorial Board is seeking detail-oriented editors with time-management skills and an ability to critically analyze texts. Editors should have a strong interest in legal scholarship and be enthusiastic about collaborating with a community of law students and scholars.

Management Board

Being a part of the Management Board offers students several exciting opportunities, including being a part of the annual Colloquium organizing committee, developing Speaker Series events, and supporting the Editorial Board's initiatives. Last year, the Management Board organized events about Indigenous health and law, the establishment of a sperm donor registry, and access to hormone therapy and sex reassignment surgery for transgender youth.

Le travail des membres de ce comité consistera également à assurer le succès financier de la Revue, ainsi qu'à promouvoir la Revue à travers des activités sur le campus et dans la communauté. Le temps investi varie au cours de l'année, mais n'est habituellement pas plus que 3 à 4 heures par semaine.

The Management Board is seeking enthusiastic candidates with an interest in event planning and working in a team environment who possess strong organizational and time-management skills. Experience in writing funding applications and/or other fundraising experience is an asset.
